

2023/24

HOW TO USE TRUSTS TO REDUCE PROPERTY TAXES

Jennifer Adams

taxinsider
PROPERTY

Contents

About Jennifer Adams .....	4
About this guide .....	4
1 What is a trust? .....	5
1.1 Why set up a trust? .....	5
1.2 Proviso – An added layer of protection .....	6
1.3 How a trust is created .....	7
1.4 The principal roles .....	7
1.5 The different types of trust .....	9
1.6 Trap concerning single property trusts .....	11
1.7 Compliance (1) – The trusts register .....	12
1.8 Compliance (2) – Tax returns .....	14
2 Using trusts to minimise income tax .....	16
2.1 The income tax charge .....	16
2.2 QIIP trust .....	17
2.3 Discretionary trusts .....	18
2.4 Mortgages or loan interest .....	21
2.5 Income tax advantages and disadvantages of each type of trust .....	23
3 Using trusts to minimise capital gains tax .....	25
3.1 The CGT charge .....	25
3.2 Amount payable and date of payment .....	26
3.3 Planning to reduce the CGT bill .....	27
3.4 CGT on the cessation of a trust .....	28
3.5 A problem linked to principal private residence relief (PPR) .....	29
3.6 Additional note – Stamp duty land tax .....	30
4 Using trusts to minimise inheritance tax (Part 1) .....	30
4.1 Excluded property trusts .....	31
4.2 Relevant property trusts .....	31
4.3 The IHT charge (1) – Transfer of Assets .....	31
4.4 The IHT charge (2) – Periodic charge .....	32
4.5 The IHT charge (3) – Assets out of the trust .....	36
5 Using trusts to minimise inheritance tax (Part 2) .....	39
5.1 Nil-rate band (NRB) discretionary trust .....	39
5.2 NRB discretionary loan trusts .....	40
5.3 Discounted gift trust .....	41
5.4 NRB discretionary will trust with main residence .....	41
5.5 Interaction of trusts and the residence nil-rate band ..	43
5.6 Agricultural property relief and business property relief .....	44
6 Trusts and minors .....	51
6.1 Categories of available trusts .....	51
6.2 The settlement rules .....	52
6.3 Trusts for bereaved minors .....	52
6.4 Age 18 To 25 trusts .....	53
Final point .....	55

‘How To Use Trusts To Reduce Property Taxes’

First published April 2012; revised April 2013, April 2014, April 2015, April 2016, May 2017, April 2018, April 2019, April 2020, April 2021, April 2022 and April 2023.

Copyright

The rights of Jennifer Adams and Tax Insider Ltd to be identified as the authors of this report have been asserted in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

© 2023 Tax Insider Ltd.

Disclaimer: This ‘Tax Insider’ guide is produced for general guidance only, and professional advice should be sought before any decision is made. Individual circumstances can vary and therefore, no responsibility can be accepted by the contributors or the publisher, Tax Insider Ltd, for any action taken, or any decision made to refrain from action, by any readers of this guide. All rights reserved. No part of this guide may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means. To the fullest extent permitted by law, the contributors and Tax Insider Ltd do not accept liability for any direct, indirect, special, consequential or other losses or damages of whatsoever kind arising from using this guide.

About Jennifer Adams

Jennifer Adams TEP ATT (Fellow) FCG has been a professional business author for over 20 years, specialising in property tax. She is the proprietor of her own accountancy firm and has her own portfolio of properties. As such, she is well-placed to advise on tax problems that landlords may face.

Jennifer has been a regular contributor to Tax Insider, Property Tax Insider and Landlord Vision.

She is the author of the following Tax Insider guides:

- Tax Tips for Company Directors
- Investing In Property – Personal Or Company Ownership
- Dividend Tax Savings Strategies Explained
- How to Maximise Landlord Expenses

---

About this guide

This special guide tells you everything you need to know about trusts in relation to property with reference to the UK's tax laws and includes strategies on how trusts can be used to minimise taxes and secure the future of property assets.

1

What is a trust?

Many believe that trusts are complicated to understand and expensive to run but, in reality, a trust is simply a private legal arrangement whereby assets are transferred to a group of people instructed to hold those assets for the benefit of others or themselves.

Trust assets may be in any form including shares, cash or even the asset of most interest to Property Tax Insider readers — property, including a main residence.

1.1 Why set up a trust?

Trusts have been recognised in English law since at least the thirteenth century and are assumed to have come into being at the time of the Crusader knights as a way of protecting the estate assets they owned when they were not around to protect them in person.

Protection was felt necessary because when someone makes an outright gift to another, either during the donor's lifetime or on death in their will, the new owner assumes all rights over that property to deal with as they wish. In comparison, creating a trust enables the person making the gift (the 'settlor') to attach certain conditions.

The popular belief is that trusts are the exclusive preserve of the rich, who use them to avoid paying tax. However, as with the Crusader knights, the protection of assets and the passing of wealth to future generations are still the main reasons for creating a trust, although there are other reasons.

In summary, the reasons are:

Protection of an asset – the beneficiary may become unable to manage the property themselves or become mentally incapable of doing so or be a minor (i.e., legally a child under the age of 18 years) who cannot take on responsibility for the property themselves. Protection may also be possible should the settlor or beneficiary divorce or be made bankrupt (although this may not always be the case – see section 1.2).

Medium to long-term wealth management – trusts are increasingly being used in determining someone's overall wealth strategy by either enabling specific assets to be included in the owner's estate or ensuring that the asset continues to be held for future generations and not sold.

Flexibility – a trust can be created to adapt to the beneficiaries' changing circumstances, whereas an outright gift cannot, e.g., the owner may wish to provide for beneficiaries who may not have been born at the time of the creation of the trust. Trusts can also benefit those settlors who are married but wish to provide for children from a previous marriage.

Provision of income – a trust can enable the income from assets to be given to one person (e.g., a surviving spouse or civil partner) whilst keeping those assets safe for future generations – this is particularly relevant to let property.

Reduction of tax – property placed within a discretionary trust does not form part of the settlor's estate on death and, as such, reduces any inheritance tax liability that otherwise might be charged (however, see section 1.2 below).

Entitlement of state benefits – once assets are placed within a discretionary trust, they no longer belong to the donor or the beneficiary. As such, the capital held within the trust is not considered when assessing entitlement to state benefits (i.e., Universal Credit).

Trap

A trust may be considered as a way of ensuring that a property is not taken into account when determining future care home costs, but be aware – the local council may consider this action to be 'deprivation of assets', i.e., the intentional reduction in assets so as not to be included in the council's calculation of care costs contribution. Specialist advice should be sought, should this be the intention.

1.2 Proviso – An added layer of protection

As stated in the previous section, one of the main reasons for creating a trust is that it adds a layer of protection between the settlor and anyone who may lay claim to their estate, be that regarding bankruptcy, divorce or any post-death claims. However, it needs to be pointed out that this is not always the case:

- Bankruptcy – the mere existence of a trust does not, in itself, offer protection. There will be none if, when making the transfer into the trust, the settlor is already insolvent (or becomes insolvent due to the transfer) or if the transfer is made to avoid creditors. Timing is important and the courts will examine all evidence to ascertain the real reason for the creation of the trust. Generally, if a trust was created more than five years before insolvency, that will be acceptable. However, there is no time limit if the intention was to defraud creditors.
- Divorce – the divorce courts have wide-ranging powers for distributing assets between divorcing spouses (or civil partners) and for making provision for any children. The court has the power to vary trusts for the benefit of a party or to extinguish or reduce the interest of either of the parties.
- Post-death claims – where the court is satisfied that within six years before death, the deceased made a disposition into a trust with the intention of defeating a claim under the Inheritance (Provision for Family and Dependents) Act 1975, it may order the trustees to pay some sum to the claimant as financial provision.

1.3 How a trust is created

There are no strict legal formalities required to create a trust (except concerning land) but it is common for a settlor (i.e., the person creating the trust – see section 1.4) to create a trust instrument (normally referred to as a trust deed – see below) in which is set out the obligations of the trustees (see below). There are three ‘certainties’ that must be present for a trust to be created, namely, certainty of intention on the part of the settlor to create a trust; certainty as to the subject matter of the trust (i.e., the property to be settled), and certainty of objects (i.e., the beneficiaries of the trust).

The trust deed may set out the following:

- who the trustees are to be;
- how new trustees are to be appointed should the situation arise (e.g., because a trustee dies or no longer wishes to continue);
- the removal, retirement, and replacement of trustees;
- the duties of the trustees;
- the powers of the trustees, including any powers they may have to appoint new beneficiaries, and what discretion they have in investing, making payments, and the buying and selling of property;
- how trustees’ fees and expenses are to be met;
- detail as to what happens to funds held within the trust after the prime beneficiary dies; and
- any specific requirements for the use of the assets and income.

Practical points

- Whatever the type of asset involved, it is always advisable to have a formal written trust deed as this helps to avoid any future misunderstandings.
- Legally, the trustee must comply with the terms of the trust deed. However, the settlor can provide a letter of wishes as a guide to the trustees explaining how they would like to see the trust fund operate, setting out the settlor’s wishes and intentions in establishing the trust. Note: a letter of wishes is not a legally binding document.

1.4 The principal roles

The settlor

All trusts have a settlor. The settlor is the person who creates the settlement, i.e., the person who transfers the legal ownership of the assets to the trustees.

The trustee

The role of the trustees is crucial.

In the case of Armitage v Nurse [1998] EWCA Civ 1279, the duty of a trustee was described as “an irreducible core of obligations owed by the trustees to the beneficiaries and enforceable by them which is fundamental to the concept of a trust... the duty of the trustees to perform the trusts honestly and in good faith for the benefit of the beneficiaries is the minimum necessary to give substance to the trusts.”

Trustees are the legal owners of the property held within the trust, but they cannot use the property as if it were their own. They keep the property secure for the benefit of the beneficiaries. The trustees are treated as one single and continuing body distinct from the individual beneficiaries.

Any person may act as a trustee so long as they have the mental capability to do so. The settlor specifies who will be the initial trustees in the trust deed, and they will often have the power to either appoint additional or remove existing trustees. Most trusts have a minimum of two trustees.

The settlor could also be a trustee – retaining the legal title and assuming the duties of a trustee but passing the beneficial ownership to someone else. There is no legal obstacle to a settlor appointing themselves as a trustee. Indeed, in many family trusts, the settlor will act as a trustee along with a professional such as the family solicitor. This gives the settlor power to have some say over how the income and capital of the trust should be distributed. However, trustees cannot benefit from the trust themselves, although professional trustees are allowed to receive reasonable remuneration for acting in their role, either under statute or by a provision in the trust deed.

Most modern trusts give the trustees wide powers to advance capital to or for the benefit of a beneficiary. If this power is not given under the trust, then s 32 of the Trustee Act 1925 allows the trustees to advance the whole of a beneficiary’s presumptive share in the capital to or for the benefit of that beneficiary.

The basic tasks of a trustee are:

- to manage the assets held within the trust, which may include investing money or ensuring that a property is managed and maintained;
- to make payments to a beneficiary periodically if required under the trust deed; and
- to prepare accounts for the assets managed and to comply with the tax rules, including registering the trust with the HMRC’s Trust Registration Service, ensuring that the appropriate tax return (Self-Assessment: Trust and Estate Tax Return SA900) is submitted to HMRC if required, and to pay any tax liabilities that might arise.

The beneficiary

The beneficiaries are the real (i.e., beneficial) owners of the trust’s property. Depending on the wording of the trust, a beneficiary can receive income from the trust (if there is any) and possibly even the actual property itself, eventually. For example, the trust deed could be